bur Mills, one. President Nixon any hope for such a candidacy has all 126 Republican delegates as mine, it was in Wisconsin." Sen, McGovern's victory gave him the momentum he wanted for the contests on April 25 in Massachusetts and Pennsylvania -where he will meet Sen. Muskie and Sen. Humphrey again. His backers last night predicted that be would win in Massachusetts and capture some delegates in Pennsylvania. By becoming the third different the first four primaries of the year, Sen. McGovern demonstrated the unsettled character of the battle for the nomination against Mr. Nixon.

Sen, McGovern said before the voting that he expected the battle to narrow down to a fight between himself and Sen. Humphrey. But there seemed at least as great a prospect that the race would continue wide open for several more primaries,

Humphrey Jinx Holds Sen. Humphrey, the third-place finisher, failed again to break his presidential primary jinx. The former Vice-President has never emerged on top in a con-tested state primary in any of his three tries for the presidency. But the effect this may have on his prospects in Pennsylvania, the state he has tagged as crucial for his hopes for renomination, remains to be seen.

In challenging Sen. Humphrey for the runner-up spot, Gov. Wallace made an impressive show strength in crossing the Mason-Dixon Line for the first time this year.

His favorite issue, school husing, was a minor factor in Wisconsin but he can expect greater receptivity on that subject when he runs in Indiana and Michigan in May. Both states have had serious busing controversies.

Gov. Wallace easily defeated Sen. Muskie, as he had in Florida, and be left the former Democratic front runner few excuses for his showing. Sen. Muskle's candidacy, which was briefly revived by his victory over Sen. McGovern in a two-man delegate contest in Illinois last week, appeared to have suffered a heavy blow in Wisconsin. As in Florida, Sen. Muskie found that he could finish no better than fourth when the full field of Democratic candidates was on the ballot.

Minskie Meetings

The Maine senator spent the afternoon in intense consultation with his principal staff aides and met today in Chicago with his largest contributors.

Lete last night Sen. Muskie said: "I will go as far and as fast as I can," dismissing any from the race.

Sen, Jackson, who had finished third in Florida ahead of Sen. Muskie and Sen. McGovern, slumped to fifth place in Wisconsin, dimming the prospects of what had always been a darkhorse candidacy. In a TV interview today, Sen.

McGovern gave himself a 50-50 chance to win the Democratic nomination. "It's 50-50 we'll go (Continued on Page 2, Col. 4)

Judge R. Dixon Herman discharged the jury after it re-ported that it could not reach a unanimous decision on charges that Father Berrigan and his six co-defendants had conspired to kidnap presidential adviser Henry A. Kissinger, blow up heating tunnels in Washington and raid draft boards.

Jurige Herman called a halt to the trial after 60 hours of deliberation by the jury of nine women and three men.

Besides not being able to agree on the kidnapping-bombing plot charges, the jury said it was deadlocked on the charges that the Rev. Berrlgan and Sister McAlister had sent threatening letters through the mail. The letters were said to have lessly deadlocked" on the main charges.

A conviction for smuggling a letter in or out of the federal penitentiary, where the priest was imprisoned during the spring and summer of 1970 for destroying draft records, is punishable by a maximum prison term of 10 years. Sister McAlister thus faces a total term of up to 30 years and Father Berrigan, who has been convicted of four counts in all, faces a possible maximum prison sentence of 40 years.

Schuetz Asks East Germans To Continue Easier Controls

Berlin Mayor Klaus Schuetz appealed to East Germany today to continue to relax its Berlin access controls.

The appeal came on the final day of a wall pass period for West Berliners to visit East Berlin and East Germany.

The East Germans also implemented greatly eased traffic controls during the same period on transit traffic to and from West Germany.

Mr. Schuetz declared: "...The gesture of the German Democratic Republic would be

Strong, Just Europe Seen By Pompidou

PARIS, April 5 (AP).—President Georges Pompidou today officially set April 23 for France's referen-dum on expanding the Common Market and said that Britain's entry would pose problems, hut that they were far outweighed by a "Europe again able to play its rightful role in the world." In a message read before the members of the National Assemhis and the Senate, Mr. Pompidou evoked a Europe of almost 300 million inhabitants, "ready to serve peace and justice."

The message followed by a few bours a cahinet meeting during which April 23, a Sunday, was confirmed as the date for the French referendum on approving the entry of Britain, Denmark, Norway and Ireland into the Common Market. Mr. Pompidou's political opposition is calling it a plebiscite for his regime's policies.

Mr. Pompidou said that if French-German reconciliation is the touchstone for the construction of Europe, "the absence of England has continuously weighed on the deliberations of the Six and slowed their forward march. Its entry and that of three other friendly countries have posed and will pose problems,"

A New Enrope

But, Mr. Pompldou said, the prospect of a new Europe far outweighs such concerns. "It will offer to all its children, to our children together with economic and social progress, pride in a great collective enterprise," he

Mr. Pompinou said he did not seek to hide the difficulties that remain and added that "no one in the world watches without some concern the birth" of a new economic and political giant "wanting to cooperate but resolved not to submit."

Farm Policy

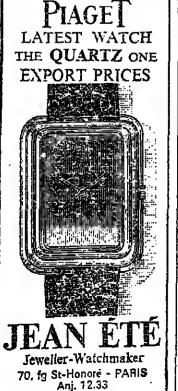

France itself, Mr. Pompidou reiterated, would hold fast to its agricultural policy. The French government seems to fear that Britain and West Germany might push in the future to open the Common Market in the world's farm imports. Foolish Assumption Mr. Schuetz sald it was foolish to assume that the Soviet Union would allow the four-power Ber-lin agreement—of which West Berlin wall passes and controls are a part—to take ef-

Hanoi Changes Its Tactics To Conventional Warfare

By Craig R. Whitney

North Vietnamese have opened a not new-they used them in 1889 new and large-scale conventionalwarfare phase of the Indochina war in their current offensive in northern South Vietnam, They are using heavy artiflery bombardments, tanks and mobile anti-aircraft defenses to push back their adversaries in the fighting south of the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ) that separates the two Vietnams.

The South Vietnamese forces, which have been trained by the Americans in similar conventional tactics, have been caught at a serious disadvantage that points up their dependence on American air power. American planes played a reduced role in the warfare because the North Vietnamese began their attacks during a week of heavy clouds

Intelligence analysts in Saigon have been struck hy the "ambitious"-as one of them put ituse of artillery. The more than 10,000 Soviet-mada shells and rockets fired from and across the DMZ have been credited with forcing the South Vietnamese to decide to ahandon the 15 forward positions which for years have been their country's northern defenses rather than wait for North Vietnamese infantry

The American pilots who have been able to get through the occasionally lifting clouds to strike at North Vietnamese tanks and trucks advancing openly down Quang Tri Province along tha main highway toward the city of Dong Ha say there is something else that is new about the current North Vietnamese tactics, namely the use of surfaceto air missiles (SAMs) to defend their troops operating in South

North Viatnamese have not brought any SAMs south of the DMZ, but are firing from just above it and inside its northern helf at planes across the border. The North Vietnamese have increased the number of their SAM sites in the southern part of the DMZ by 25 percent in the last year. The exact number there now is not known, but there are probably about 30 launchers. The missiles have a 21-mile range at 40,000 feet, and thus can hit planes in most of Quang Tri Province from north of the DMZ. The North Vietnamese use of Winds of 78 miles an hour and heavy rain have paralyzed life in the capital, disrupted electricity supplies and telephones and destroyed hundreds of thatch and mud houses.

At least 40 people were killed in the Dacca area in two storms last night, the agency said, with reports of casualties still coming in. At least 45 people were killed in a cyclone which hit the Mymensingh area Saturday, and unofficial reports put the death toll between 70 and 150. About 50,000 people were made

360-Member U.S. Olympic Team Is Invited to White House Sendoff

WASHINGTON, April 5 (AP) .- Former Olympic star Jesse Owens, 58, disclosed yesterday that President Nixon plans to give a personal sendoff to U.S. athletes going to compete in the 1972 summer Olympic Games in Munich.

At the White House in a dual role—to promote the Olympics and as grand marshal of the 1972 Cherry Blossom Festival parade, Mr. Owens chatted with Mrs. Nixon (ahove) and gave her a red, white and blue belt, designed for Olympic players, President Nixon "to hold up his pants."

Mr. Owens, who won three individual gold medals and was a member of the winning 400-meter relay team at the 1936 Games in Berlin, said the President has invited the 360-plus U.S. competitors in this year's Olympics to a White House reception Aug. 17, the day before they leave for Munich

First Virus Is Isolated In U.S. Water

Traditional Test for Bacteria of No Help

By Boyce Rensberger

NEW YORK April 5 (NYT).— Scientists at Michigan State Uni-versity have isolated viruses from drinking water, apparently for the first time in the United States. Because of the circumstances of the finding, the scientists say that it points to a potentially serious health hazard that may exist in many water supplies. The virus was a Type-2 police virus of the kind used in oral polio vaccines. The water supply was a 100-foot-deep well certified as safe hy a state health depart-ment using a traditional test that looks for bacteria but not for

Since the water had heen deemed safe after a bacterial test, the scientists said such a test can no longer be considered sufficient proof of freedom from all forms of contamination,

The scientists suspect that the viruses—submicroscopic causes of infectious diseases—were excreted by recently immunized persons and that they seeped from the sewage system through the ground to contaminate the water supply.

Although they have not found any other types of virus in drinking water, the scientists say that if polio virus can get from sewage into ground water, many other types of virus that cause disease can also get into the water.

Heretofore, public health experts have known that hepatitis viruses can be transmitted through drinking water even though the virus itself has never been isolated from a suspect water supply. The knowledge is based solely on such circumstantial evidence as that all the people in a college dormitory who drank from a certain water fountain came down with hepatitis while everyone else in the building remained healthy.

Michigan Restaurant

It was this kind of evidence that led the Michigan State scientists to the well supplying Michigan restaurant, where they found the polio virus. Several people who drank water there became ill within 30 hours, while patrons who had not had the water were unaffected.

Because polio virus is not known to cause such an Illness, the scientists suspect that another type of virus, which they were unable to isolate, must also have seeped from sewage water into the underground lake.

WASHINGTON, April 5 (NYT). -Ralph Nader accused General Motors Corp. yesterday of illegally trying to conceal the existence of a defective carburetor that had caused fires in 1972 models of the Chevrolet Vega.

The consumer advocate said that the company, aware of the defect, had told dealers to fix the carburetors on all Veges hrought into their shops but bad not sent defect notices to owners or to the government as required by federal law.

Mr. Nader made the charge in letter to Douglas W. Toms, director of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. Citing reports of fire hazards in 1972 Vegas and Ford LTDs of the 1969-71 model years, he called for immediate investigations by the safety agency.

A spokesman for the safety agency said that the charges would be studied and that Mr. Toms would reply in writing to Mr. Nader.

General Motors announced last night that it was recalling 130,000 1972 Vegas because of a possible fire hazard. The company denied that it had attempted to hypass official procedures, as Mr. Nader charged The Ford Motor Co. said that it was unaware of any common defects" in its prodnots that might cause fires and was "unable to identify the alleged incidents" reported by Mr. Nader.

Jury Becomes Man's Best Friend As Tax Justice Goes to the Dogs

ALBANY. Ga., April 5 (AP).—A 40-year-old man, arrested last November and charged with listing five dogs as dependents on his income tax form, has been acquitted by a jury.

In his charge to the jury, U.S. District Court Judge J.

Robert Elliot turned to poetry in an effort to show that the dog, though a friend to man, was not a legal dependent. Using Lord Byron's epitaph to his dog, the judge said:

"The poor dog,

New York Court Backs Detective, Model for Movie

NEW YORK, April 5 (Reuters). -Edward Egan, on whom the tough narcotics detective 'Popeye' Doyle in the film 'The French Connection" was based, won the right to collect a police pension today as a court overturned his discharge from the New York police department.

Mr. Egan was discharged seven hours before his retirement was to take effect. Police Commis sioner Patrick Murphy hased the action on two charges that Mr. Egan kept seized contraband in his personal locker while awaiting the trial of people he arrested rather than turning it over to the police property room. Mr. Egan said he had been disciplined for projecting an image as a "tough cop," which did not please the department. In overturning the commis-sioner's action, Justice George Starke sald, "The court is satis-fied that the dismissal was a punishment so disproportionate to the offense . . , as to be shocking to one's sense of fairness."

The judge's reversal will let Mr. Egan collect a $5,500 yearly As a retired policeman, he also will be eligible to carry a pistol. Friends have said he feared to walk around unarmed because some of the thousands of drug traffickers he arrested might

Sen. Goldwater further said that Congress had repeatedly voted new powers and new funds for the Vietnam war by overwhelming margins, and had always retained full powers to cut off funds for unpopular conflicts. Therefore, he said, no new special congressional control was necessary and a decision on military action was better left to the President than to 500 members of

Sen. Jacob Javits, the bill's chief Republican sponsor, responded that a cutoff of funds was completely unacceptable as the sole remedy for unauthorized presidential military action. The New Yorker said a fund cutoff was a remedy after the fact, while the war powers bill would set up a regular mechanism in which Congress, at the incep-tion of presidential military action, would review the situation and decide whether an emergency action should be converted into a long-term war.

Sen. Peter H. Dominick, R., Colo., supporting Sen. Goldwater, sald the specific language of the bill might: block an immediate U.S. response if the Russians attacked a NATO ally; prevent U.S. officers in NATO's command from operating in an attack on such an ally; raise doubts whether the United States could "retaliate" against an attack on its forces stationed abroad instead of merely "repelling" such an attack; bar the United States from protecting its citizens, and prevent a show of force by the deployment of troops or ships to a trouble spot.

Then, with enthusiasm, he would go about presenting the Powell side, which was invariably a spicy blend of his own great intelligence, some truths and, often, items that the opposition would call untruths.

The larger ingredients in his explanation were always irascipromising discain for what he regarded as the hypocrisy of men who did in secret what he never tried to hide.

A further and more direct insight into the character of the flamboyant Mr. Powell came in his own summation of his congressional career when he stated: As a member of Congress, I have done nothing more than any other member and, by the grace of God, I intend to do not one blt

Adam jr. frequently slipped out of his father's church meetings to attend sessions of Marcus Garvey's African Nationalist Pioneer Movement.

University Degrees Young Powell took a bachalor's degree at Colgate University in 1930 and a master's degree at Columbia University the following

When he emerged as a leader in his own right, he carried with him the eloquence of his father and the ability of a Marcus Garvey to sway crowds along lines of racial pride.

It was during the Depression that the younger Powell launched his career as a highly individualistic crusader. He led a series of demonstrations in Herlem against major business concerns department stores, bus lines, the telephone company, Harlam Hospital and others-and forced them to hire Negroes, some for Simultaneously Mr. Powell, as business manager and leader of the social and welfare programs at the Abyssinian Baptist Church, directed a somp kitchen and relief operation that fed, clothed and provided fuel for thousands of the Harlem destitute. .

The freshman legislator found that racial discrimination barred him from such public facilities cs dining rooms, steam baths, showers and barber shops. He made use of each of these facilities, with characteristic flair, and insisted that his entire staff follow his lead. As a new representative, he engaged in several fiery debates with Southern segregationists, sought to end discrimination in the military services and triedthrough what was called the Powell amendment—to deny federal funds to any project where discrimination existed. The fight continued as he grew in seniority. He fought to get Negro newsmen admitted to the Senate and House press gallerles, introduced legislation that would outlaw Jim Crow transportation and forced Congress to notice discriminatory practices by groups such as the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Carving a Career From Pipes

By Jan Sjöby

COPENHAGEN (IHT).— A girl smoking a pipe isn't likely to cause a single raised eyebrow in this end of the world or anywhere else where the cigarette

A girl designing, carving, selling (and smoking) pipes is likely to attract attention though. This is what Anne Julle is doing. Her hand-carved pipes sell around the world in such places as New York, Munich and Tokyo. Each of her pipes is a work of art, com-manding prices from $480 to $550. Miss Julie-listed in the munlcipal register as Mrs. Rasmussen -operates a small factory, a small export office and a small retail shop in the Vestergade, a narrow alley in central Copenhagen. In addition to her custommade pipes, some 40 a month, her three (male) assistants turn out a line of standard pipes relatively reasonably priced at $17 and up.

The Fiat 130 is a big car with the precise good handling qualities that normally only a small car a can offer can offer those special extra features have to be paid for— usually in terms of handling, nimbleness, and driving ease. Yet these are the very qualities expected of a Fiat. And that includes the Fiat 130. So we designed a big car as easy to drive and as agile as a small one. A contradiction in terms, you might say. But our designers were able to reconcile them by exceptional attention to the driver's needs, and to those features which influence the feel of the car. The steering, for example. And the suspension—independent all round—with a completely original independent rear suspension system natented by Fiat, which achieves

The North Vietnamese Offensive

North Vietnam's offensive across the "Demilitarized Zone" confirms two facts. First, it reminds us that Hanol retains the will and means to fight for power in the South, despite losses which to Americans would be intolerable. Second, it tells us that Saigon remains unprepared to cope aicne with such attacks-massive air support from the United States is still required. Mr. Nixon may have "Vletnamized" the ground fighting in South Vietnam. But he has thoroughly "Americanized"-or failed to "de-Americanize"-the air war throughout Indochina. In the fourth year of his administration it turns out that an American combat role remains essential in order to sustain the government in Salgon; This is so regardless of how the current fight is scored. Mr. Nixon is, in brief, a double hostage: To Hanoi's determination and to Saigon's frailty. He is hooked-by the military facts, and still more by his own excassive and outdated Against all imperatives of discretion and common sense, his administration keeps offering rationales designed to justify, if not compel, continued American participation in the war. At a time when it should be conditioning the American people to the fact that the American reach in Vietnam is limited and the American responsibility has been more than amply honored, the administration hauls out language and logic of a kind best employed to gird the nation for another decade of war. Thus officials, all but openly abandoning their past-stated confidence in Saigon, claim there has been a North Vietnamese "invasion" and a "flagrant violation" of the DMZ. Washington la 'leaving all options open," spokesmen

The reality is that "all options" are distinctly not open: Is Mr. Nixon contemplating reintroduction of a half-million troops. or a nuclear strike on Hanol? It is reckless to indicate such to Hanol, Salgon and the American people alike. What the President ought to be saying is the truth; that few options are open; that—as we have said before

-the United States has done just about all that it could reasonably and fairly be expected to do to carry South Vietnam to the point of self-sufficiency; and that it is possible though far from certain that the particular Vletnamese who may some day end up with the power in Saigon may not be those selected by Washington, though they may have their own reason to want close or businesslike relationship with Washington all the same. Doubtless some Americans would find this outcome hard to stomach; others would not. To rule out that possibility as a matter of policy, however, is to commit this country to a continuance of the war in Indochina whose end only the administration's stoutest partisans can pretend to foresee

All of us are too prone to measure the war by its visibility on television or in the headlines, or by the weekly listings of American casualtles (mercifully diminished), or by its ebh and flow as a political issue. But meanwhile for the Vletnamese, and for Laotians and Cambodians as well, the war goes on more or less feroclously and we are rapidly losing what capacity we ever had to bring it to an end by force of arms. Nobody could promise that it would not go on, one way or another, or perhaps end badly, even if the United States decided that it had done what it appropriately could; that it could not halt its own air and ground combat participation and offer to bargain troop withdrawal for POW release; that it would offer to Salgon the same option of soliciting external aid which Hanoi reserves for Itself; and that the question of power in Saigon had best be left to the Vietnamese themselves. We are not, in short, confronted by a particularly happy or easy choice. But that is the essential nature of a limited war effort, conducted with limited means and for limited ends. And that, in turn, is the hard lesson of Vletnam. which sooner or later the American public is going to have to be encouraged to accept—with or without presidential leadership.

Clampdown in Turkey

It will be a cause for deep regret, especially in NATO countries, that Turkey has resorted to government by decree and suspended all political activities. In his letter seeking assent from party leaders, President Cevdet Sunay insisted that democratic and parliamentary principles would remain in force: but If the Grand National Assembly is stripped of all power this cannot be true.

Ever since President Inonu organized the country's first free election in 1950, and handed over power peacefully when his party was surprisingly upset. Turkey has tried harder than any of its neighbors to make democracy work. When the army feit compelled to overthrow the corrupt Menderes regime in 1960, it restored civilian. democratic rule with 17 months, in striking contrast to the subsequent conduct of the colonels in Greece.

In recent years, however, Turkey has been vulnerable to the same forces of lawlessness, anarchy and the revolutionary left that have afflicted many countries. The military forced the replacement of Premier Demirel by an all-party regime under Nihat Erim a year ago, then insisted on martial law after the so-called "People's Liberation Army" kidnapped and murdered Israel's consul general in Istanbul last May.

Gen. Sunay's new crackdown is a response to the 'liberation army's" savage murder last week of three kidnapped foreign techniclans-two Britons and a Canadian-during a shootout in which police killed nine of the terrorists. It would be comforting to believe that this further sacrifice of freedom will restore domestic peace in Turkey; out the persistence of terrorism during ten months of martial law and drastic security actions furnish little grounds for hope.

Congress and the CIA conducted hearings last week on a bill requiring the Central Intelligence Agency to provide the appropriate congressional committees with the same intelligence analyses it regularly furnishes the White House. This legislation, introduced last year by Sen. Cooper, ought to be expedited in the interests of strengthening the machinery of foreign policy.

As Congress reasserts its rightful role in the foreign policy process, it is essential that its members be as fully informed as possible. The respective congressional committees are entitled to share the fruits of intalligence-gathering operations for which the American taxpayer is billed up to $6 hillion annually. These fruits include assessments which sometimes sharply challenge executive policies, as the Pentagon Papers

There is ample precedent for Sen. Cooper's proposal. A former CIA official testifled last week that the agency has been furnishing highly classified intelligence on world atomic development to the Joint Atomic Energy Committee for 15 years, with no security breaches. Even now, senior agency

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee officials provide oral briefings to other committees on request, but only with White House approval. Congress could better discharge its own constitutional responsibilities in the foreign policy field if it had full and direct access to this information.

> Beyond the Cooper bill, it is high time Congress revived its languishing effort to establish closer scrutiny of intelligence operations. In a move designed to sidetrack legislation with this aim, the Foreign Relations Committee in 1967 was invited to send three members to the CIA joint briefings heid by the Armed Services and Appropriations Committees, which are currently responsible for overseeing intelligence activities. But no meetings of this group were called during all of last year-an "oversight" of frightening dimensions.

> It is not enough for Congress to know what the CIA is saying. It is also essential that at least key members of the legislative branch, which provides the funds for worldwide intelligence-gathering and other undercover operations, keep informed about what, in general, this secret arm of the U.S. gov-

Muskie's showing here was even more damaging to him than his fourth place showing in the Florida primary last month. Unlike Florida, Wisconsin is the sort of Northern industrial state which Democratic presidential nominees count on as their base for victory in general elections.

Message Via Wallace

Gov. George Wallace's relatively strong showing bere was an impressive display of the power of his protest cempaign in a Northern state, Apparently Yankee voters are as willing as Southern voters to "send a message" to Weshington that they are fed up with the public policies of the present and recent past.

Sen, Hubers Humphrey, while making a strong showing, did not achieve the first place finish which would have given his candidacy a strong launching pad for later primaries. Because Humphrey is from the neighbor state have a natural advantage with Wisconsin voters.

McGovern's impressive win here evidently will bring him most of Wisconsin's delegates as well as the national prominence which his campaign has lacked for the 15 months since his unprecedented early announcement for the presidency in January, 1971. Long ago McGovern placed a strategic het that Wisconsin would be his "breakthrough" state, raising him to the front rank of the major contenders, and for the moment at least that bet has paid off handsomely while Muskle bas been unable to translate wide but relatively shallow voter support into primary victories against a large field of competitors. Mc-Govern and his carefully-constructed organization of the young and disaffected cashed in here on a narrower but much more intense appeal McGovern's main hope for the nomination is that the field will nerrow to one "establishment" candidate such as Muskie or Humphrey, with McGovern remaining the champion of the forces of change and discontent which seem to be running so strong in the Democratic party

The Wisconsin primary had been considered a survival test which was likely to eliminate at least one of two contenders. There was no clear indication Tuesday night that Sen. Henry M. Jackson would accept the jodgment of Wisconsin as final and quit the race, but Mayor John Lindsay announced he would enter no more primarles.

'Giant Step'

The candidates themselves saw ft this way:

McGovern said his victory represented "the first giant step" toward the presidential nomination in July and election in November. "There's a certain amount of hazard in being put in the front-runner position," said McGovern. I think that after a year of adversity we can stand at least one night of prosperity."

Asked whether he would quit the race, Muskie said: "I don't know the meaning of the word. It will be a long hard road shead ...we will win some and lose some, but we will win the nomination in July."

Wallace called his showing a "great victory" and apologized to his supporters for campaigning only eight days in Wisconsin. He told reporters be could have won if he had been on the scene

Humphrey said he was looking forward to the Pennsylvania primary April 25. "We'll beat George (McGovern) there," be said. Humphrey attributed Wallace's strong showing to a crossover vote by Republicans, the "Wisconsin shuffle" as Humphrey called it, which will not be permitted in Pennsylvania.

Humphrey said Muskie now faces a "very difficult uphill fight." But he said "each primary stands on its own" and added that be expects "other strong efforts" by Muskle, As for Tuesday's outcome, Humphrey said: "No one can predict Wisconsin." Meanwhile, there is not only economic and monetary trouble abroad, but the administration is now confronted by a major invasion across the Demilitarized Zone in Victnam, and cries from Barry Goldwater, among others, to stop dilly-dallying and launch major bombing attack against the enemy in Haiphong.

In combination the Vietnam war and the "supermarket war" make it a little difficult for the President to campaign on the old alogan of peace and prosperity. The chances are that the food prices will be brought down, at least temporarily, and that the bombing will blunt the enemy's attack, but when the Democrats finally do end their self-destruction and get a candidate, Vietnam, high prices, and unemploy-ment will probably still be lively

This is what modifies the Republican optimism after Wisconsin. There are still 19 more primaries to go and the Democrats will be cutting each other up for yet another three months, but in the end, events are likely, to play a more decisive role than anything else.

Every political party has its nightmare. For the Democrats the nightmare is war and for the Republicans the nightmare is economic trouble, and as long as the President has to worry about rest comfortably at night.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

Goodrich Quits Footwear Business

B.F. Goodrich Co. is going out of the footwear business and is planning to sell the assets of that division. A apokesman said the action will not adversely affect 1972 earnings. Goodrich manufactures a broad line of canvas sneakers, sandals and other casual footwear, golf and tennis shoes and deck shoes. The company also sells rubber overshoes, boots and other bad weather footgear and work wear. Much of the waterproof footwear has been manufactured by other companies to Goodrich specifications.

Celanese States It Is Sound

Celanese Corp., which recently wiped out 1971 earnings with an unexpected $62.2 million special charge, has circulated an internal memorandum reassuring its too managers that the company's financial health is aound. The memo, from president John Brooks, is a rejoinder to Wall Street conjecture that without a heity spurt in earnings or additional financing, the big fibers, plastics and chemicals concern might have dif-ficulty financing growth while maintaining dividend and debt repayment achedules over the next few years. A potential investor, looking for fast profit based on 1972's first and second quarter sarnings, 'probably would not be interested in the company at this time." Mr. Brooks conceded in the memo. "On the other hand." he said, "we would be surprised if continuing improvement in earnings did not develop during the next 12 to 18 months." First-quarter earnings may possibly be 10 to 15 percent lower than the previous year's, ha aaid, noting that second-quarter results may also fall short of the yearago levels. "We feel confident that the downturn in earnings is temporary and has bottomed out. The net effect of all this would be to postpone to approximately mid-year the substantial increase in the rate of Celanese earnings that had been expected in early 1972," he said. Mr. Brooks said the $82.3 million writedown of the entire investment in Columbia Cellulose resulted in a 522.7 million net loss for 1971 although operating earnings rose 13 percent to $59.5

Procter & Gamble in Japanese Pact

Procter & Gamble and Nippon Sunhome of Japan have agreed to set up a joint venture to make and sell toilet soap and detergents, using the U.S. firm's techniques. Japanese government permission for the project will be sought shortly. The Unilever group has already obtained approval from the government to set up a firm to produce soap and detergents in Japan. The U.S. firm also announced that it has acquired a controlling interest in Societa Generale del Caffe of Milan, which produces and sells coffee in the Italian market, for an undisclosed amount.

NEW YORK, April 5 (NYT).- 54 7/8 and Chase Manhattan Prices on the New York Stock Exchange swung sharply higher today in heavy trading and charged decisively through the critical 950-barrier in the Dow Joues industrial average.

The Dow ran ahead throughout the session and closed at 954.55, up 11.14, in its biggest upsurge in nearly two months. The closing level was the highest since May 19, 1969, when it finished at 959.02.

Trading volume totaled 22.96 million shares, up sharply from 18.11 million yesterday and the most since March 1, when 23.67 million were traded. The heavy turnover added authority to the upswing in prices.

Scarcely a Hesitation

The 950-level in the Dow had been cited by technical analysts as a major area of resistance. The Dow's ability to race through it with scarcely a hesitation was interpreted as a sign of technical strength.

On the fundamental side, a quarterly survey released by the University of Michigan indicated that consumers' attitudes about the economy in recent months had improved markedly and that many feel now is the time to make major purchases. The reluctance of consumers to express confidence in the nation's economy by reducing their savings and stepping up their purchasing has been a key factor in the slow response of the economy to the government's fiscal prodding. The session's two most active issues were bank stocks. First National City climbed 1 1/8 to

By Alan Truscott

Playing a game contract from opposite sides of the table made a difference of two tricks on the diagramed deal from a recent U.S. tournament.

At one table North opened the bidding with one diamond, South responded one spade, and West overcalled in clubs. North's hand was sufficiently strong to justify a raise to four spades, and with a little imagination he could even see a faint chance of a slam, in spite of the fact that his partner had passed originally.

South might hold the diamoud ace together with a spade suit headed by the ace-king, in which case six spades would have a cbance. Therefore, en route to four spades Forth bid four clubs —a "splinter" bid announcing a fit in spades, a maximum of one card in the enemy club suit, and mild slam ambitions,

However, South was not tempted by the slam invitation, even though his hand was almost as good as it could be in the light of his original pass, and signed off in four spades.

West had a wide choice of leads. Against opponents who had shown slam interest, the chance of taking four tricks with high cards seemed slight. He knew the dummy : Id produce a singleton or a vo... in clubs so be led his singleton diamond three. East won with the ace and returned a diamond for West might have cashed a club trick at this point, hoping that his partner would be able to make a trump trick, but this seemed a slim chance. Instead, he underled his ace-king-queen of clubs and was rewarded East was able to win with the jack and play another diamond to defeat the contract when West ruffed.

In the replay West opened the bidding with two chos, a natural hid, and North eventually became the declarer in four spades. However, the bidding gave East no reason to lead the diamond ace, and the contract was easily

PLACES WHERE I'VE DONE TIME By William Saroyan. Praeger Publishers. 182 pp. $6.95.

Reviewed by Peter Sourian

WILLIAM SAROYAN is a kind of Armenian Buffalo Bill. As wild and woolly as the marvelous character in 'The Time of Your Life" who really and truly herds cattle on a bicycle and falls in love with a midget weighing 39 pounds. His feats and misad-ventures have been no less mythic whether it's been a matter of losing tens of thousands of hardearned dollars on the turn of a card, stubbornly marrying the same girl twice, or writing a Pulitzer Prize play in six days on a het

Admittedly Saroyan can be sentimental and silly; boastful and repetitive too. And at 64 he still astounds-discovers clichés, burnishes them, and presents them to us with a naïveté that can only be attractive in a 17-year-old virgin.

Yet books of his such as "My Name Is Aram," extracted from a rather grim Fresno child-hood, will certainly be read a hundred years hence. As for "The Time of Your Life," the five-act vaudeville improvisation for which Saroyan refused Pulitzer Prize money (saying almost entirely seriously that business had no right to patronize art), it's still on the boards after almost 33 years. this season in Chicago. And in all but the worst of his dozens of books there is a story, a chapter, a scene, a page that works just Saroyan's exuberance first caught the fancy of the American public in 1934 when "The Daring Young Man on the Flying Trapeze" somehow managed convincingly to deny a world depression even though the main character in the title story died of starvation brought about by unemployment. Ever since then Saroyan has been performing without a net.

He once told his son that if he celebrated his Fresno boyhood so lyrically it was because it was so God-awful, that only hy making it into something beantiful was he able to survive it.

If you think over the apparent lovely atmosphere of such tales as "The Summer of the Beautiful White Horse," or "The Jour-ney to Hanford," you eventually find yourself thinking of how nightmarishly frightening and grubby a tyrannical peasant grandfather can be, or how painful a time an orphan boy of immigrant parents might have in a California school, or how bad it is to have no money.

The best of Saroyan's radically different writing keeps the real world out and maintains the fabulous integrity of his own world. It is the world of a child: vibrant, powerfully simple, with everything larger than life.

But it's hard to remain so naive, reality seeps m no matter what. Furthermore, Saroyan doesn't even come close. Actaally he's a tough man, a survivor,

For a number of years now Saroyan has been producing volumes of antobiographical reminiscence. There are strong scenes in some of them, such as "Not Dying," and "Here Comes." There Goes You Know Who." A form editorial talent might have firm editorial talent might have made one solid volume out of the "Places Where I've Done Time" is the latest and the most sketchy of these haphazard collections. It's a short book, put out by yet another publisher, divided into 68 short sections, each bearing the name of a place Scroyan has been The sections are not arranged in time-sequence. Thus we travel via free-association from San Francisco in 1932 to Oakland in 1912 to Paris in 1949 to Fresno in 1922, It's as if Saroyan, like the overly dependent child who insists on his own magic and omnipotent divin-ity, nevertheless expects God to do the job of somehow pulling the whole business together into a meaningful whole. Since God does indeed seem to have done this work for him several times in the past, one may understand the expectation.

It doesn't heppen. What we get is all the same willy-nilly vices, Except for one thing: We learn that Saroyan was brought up partly in an orphanage, the Fred-Finch Orphanage in Oakland. Toward the end of the book he describes himself lying sick and alone in the attic room of the alone in the attic room of the place, way back in 1912. Downstairs the other kids are singing "O Holy Night." He feels utterly forsaken, tempted to let go his courage and die, to withdraw finally into the sway of the music. Here the Buffalo Bill in Saroyan recedes, gives full way for a moment to that Arab who has always burned in him, saying "No always burned in him, saying "No foundation. All the way down the line. . . Whole world." If he could tell us about that as he once made his own Wild West terrific for us, then, again, he'd be telling us something, something

Game Called Because Of Some Hard Heads

By Red Smith

NEW YORK, April 5 (NYT).— Every published mention of the baseball strike includes a statement that the owners have been "contributing" $5,450,000 annually to the players' benefit plan and have offered to increase their "contribution" to $5,940,-000. Nobody ever questions this terminology or asks where the money comes from and who owns it. But it's time somebody did.

The money comes from revenue produced by the ball players with minimal assistance from the business office. To be sure, they receive salaries and partial expenses while producing it. Club presidents get salaries and expenses, too. So do general managers and vice-presidents and personnel directors and the comdents and John J. Gaherin, who carries messages between the owners and the players.

The money paid into the pension fund is a donation inspired by the spontaneous generosity of the owners in exactly the same sense that the Mets' rent in Shea Stodium is a gift to the city and what the Yankees spend for bats is largezs to Hillerich & Bradsby,

Lack of Communications On the subject of terminology, we have Charley Finley's statement that the players "don't contribute one red cent to their own pension plan." This is one of those half-truths, or quartertruths or seven-eighths truths that abound in the language of the Oekland Athletics' proprietor. For 20 years up to 1967, the players paid a share of their earnings into the pension fund, which now contains millions collected directly from them.

We ere told that the players bave the most generous pension plen in America and are greedily grasping for more. The truth is, money is not the issue in this strike. In the contract discussions, the players have told the owners: "We favor a four-year agreement (same length as the contract for network television. the source of the revenue) and we think a one-year deal makes no tense at all. You want a one-year deal. So be it."

"Point two," the players have seid, "you have agreed to an increase of $490,000 and say you won't make it a penny more. Very well, we'll accept that and use the surplus already in the fund to offset the increase in the cost of living."

In Advance

"Finally" the players have said, "you disagree with us on the prudence of using this surplus. Okay, we'll put it in writing that if it turns out to be a mistake we'll take the loss and absolve you of financial responsibility." owners' response was a flat no. In fact, a subcommittee of eight owners-called the Player Rela-

Gussie Busch, the Cardinal owner who sat behind Gaherin during the announcement, led the fight against yielding in any way or making an offer to the players. Charlie Finley of Oakland and Ewing Kauffman of Kanses City were also among the hard-liners.

Owners Split Mike Burke of the New York Yankees and Bob Short of the Texas Rangers were among those in favor of making some sort of offer. In all, about 10 of the 24 teams felt that way. To adopt any action, a majority of 13 is needed but it must include at least five members of each league.

"The clubs call upon the players to rejoin their clubs so the season may begin as soon as practicable," Gaherin's formal statement ended.

A professional negotiator on the management side of labor conflicts involving railroads and the New York newspapers before he was bired by baseball four years ago, Gaherin said ne would Marvin Miller, the players' rep-Gaherin said he would call resentative, this morning to resume negotiations.

He was asked what the negotiations consisted of, since the owners had not made any counter-proposals since their original offer.

"We can always listen." he said. "until we hear something we can agree to."

He was asked if, in his experience, strikers had ever agreed to return to work without some sort of agreeable counter-proposal in front of them.

"Not in anything I've been involved in personally," he said, "but there have been such cases."

Bill Bartholomay of Atlanta was one of those who thought it was "realistic" to ask the players to come back while negotiations were resumed. "It might not be in the steel industry, but with professional people I think it's realistic," he said.

Belgrade States Fischer's Match Still Off Board

BELGRADE, April 5 (AP).-The new representative of top American chess challenger Bobby Fischer will arrive here next week in an attempt to renegotiate the organization of the world title match between Fischer and champion Boris Spassky of the Soviet Union.

But the Yugoslav organizers warned today that the representative, Paul Marshall, would be wasting his time as "no new negotiations will be considered."

Marshall will bring news that Fischer is now ready to play Spassky in both Belgrade and Reykjavík in the period originally egreed upon, the International Chess Federation informed the Yugoslav organizers today in a telegram.

Fischer earlier said he would not play in either of the two cities after the organizers rejected his request for a share in possible profits from the match in excess of the $138,500 originally agreed upon.

The Bulls, though playing without first-string center Tom Boerwinkle and with forwards Bob Love and Chet Walker handicapped by injuries, got off to a 28-18 lead in the first quarter. They lead 50-46 at the half. But West brought the Lakere back in the first five minutes of the third period and thereafter the Bulls couldn't come closer than two points. West netted nine points in the third period and 14 in the fourth.

Nicklaus Talks Par: Masters Is Easy, Hard

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 5 (NYT). —Jack Nicklaus, the favorite, said yesterday the Masters, which starts tomorrow, was "tougher to win than most pro tournaments and in some ways it is easier." But George Archer, who won the Greater Greensboro (N.C.) Open last Sunday and the 1969

Masters, disagreed. 'No tournament is harder to win than any other," said Archer. "It isn't any harder to win the Masters than the Hartford Open. Nicklaus is the favorite, but if he isn't putting or playing well, he won't win. You have to get the breaks to win any tournament." Nicklaus is going after his fourth Masters, and the grand slam: The Masters, the United States Open, the British Open and the Professional Golfers' Association championship. It is the prestige of the Masters which makes it tough, Nicklaus seid. Charles Coody agreed with Nicklaus's appraisal of the event's difficulties. "It's what's in your mind," said Coody, last year's winner. "It's not the money, but the fact that it is a major championship, and Nicklaus said the usually small field was the reason the tourna-ment could be easier to win than most tour events, which embrace 144 contestants. This year it is expected that there will be 90 Masters starters; 77 were in last

A Golf Tour For Blacks In Planning

GREENSBORO, N. C., April 5 (NYT) .- A plan for a tour for black golf professionals has been announced here. A 10-tournament circuit with purses of $10,000 each is on the drawing boards of a group known as the United Association for Professional Golfers with headquarters in New York

Harold Donovant, who became the first black pro to take a post layout, is heading the drive to gain more opportunity for tournament play for black golfers. Here for last week's Greater Greensboro Open, Donovant said: "If we don't have an opportunity for black professionals in an organized tour soon, I think they will disappear from the golf scene within a few years. "The source of black golfers is in the caddle ranks, just as it was years ago for the whites. But electric carts have supplanted caddies and our black caddles are disappearing.

"Black golfers have to learn to play now on public and municipal courses. Unlike those attended by whites, black colleges do not have golf teams. Most of the youngsters on the national pro circuit today are products of white college golf. This is an advantage that blacks do not have." Donovant said his contemplated tour would permit both whites and blacks to be contestants. Whites and blacks become eligible for the national Professional Golfers' Association tour by gradueting from a players' school. Donovant says he is appealing to golf manufacturers and leaders in the black community to contribute money for the tournaments. "We'll have to play on public courses, hut once we have the funds I know our toor will be successful," he said, "Black tournaments now sponsored receive support of local interests, but there is no national organization to supervise the whole tour.

"At present, the United Negro Association limits its activity to a national championship. Such golfers as Pete Brown and George Johnson, who have won on the national pro circuit, and Lee Elder, who won the Nigerian Open recently, have earned the right to play on the PGA circuit, but they gained their early experience as caddies and in various black tour-

From the Ruins—A 12th-Century Monastery

By Hebe Dorsey

LA VERNE, France, April 5 (IHT).—"My wife and I will remember with pleasure our visit to the Chartreuse de La Verne," President Georges Pompidou wrote, in August, 1970, to Annette Englebert, president of the Association des Amis de la Chartreuse de La Verne. "My congratulations to you and Miss Le Moine for your efforts in restoring the monument . . . the letter went on.

President Pompidou was talking about splendid and monumental ruin, the Carthusian monastery saved from complete decay hy two women in love with vieilles pierres fold stooes, Le. ruins). Annette Englebert, helress to the Belgian tire fortune, and Annick Le Moine, a Beaux-Arts graduate from Bordeaux, began their project four years ago.

They were living in nearby La Garde-Freinet, 17 kilometers from Saint-Tropez where they ran an antique shop. They had already tried their hand at restoration, spending considerable time and effort in refurbishing an old, abandoned hamiet, Les Seigneurolles, where they now live.

One day, on a picnic, they discavered the chartrense, a 12th-century fortress-like ensemble with Wagnerian grandeur, set in a rough and rugged countryside. In the middle of the Maures Mountains at an altitude of 415 meters, the monastery is surrounded by acres of pine and chestnut forests with springs and precipices and not a soul in sight for miles around. Built in 1170 by Pierre Isnard, bishop of Toulon, the chartreuse was deliberately set in this remote region. It still has a mooastic feeling of solitude and independence. For centuries, it was a religious and intellectual center. But, during the French Revolution, the monks were chased out and the huilding began falling apart, victim of time, fires and pliferers.

"Wheo we first saw it." Miss Englebert said, "we felt we had to do something. We simply couldn't let it go to pieces." The task was awesome.

The chartreuse had already been classified as a national mooument (in 1921). Permission to restore it would be difficult

Next, Miss Englebert and Miss Le Moine founded the Association des Amis de la Chartreuse. Help came quickly from a number of local residents, including Alfred Max, publisher of Réalités and former movor of La Garde-Freinet (now conseiller general of the Department of the Var), Then, to work. A blend of Romanesque and Renaissance architecture, the chartreuse, even in its rundown state, is imposing. - The main gate and cloisters are decorated with serpentine, quarried locally—the green stone looks like rough marble. The main cloister is lined with the monks' quarters, each a four-room apartment, opening on a tiny garden. The galleries of the cloister surround a courtyard with three pine trees in the middle.

The first step was to hring water, gas and electricity up the difficult mule track of a road. Then, came a roof and 44 new windows for the hostelry. The two women installed living quarters for a guide and his family, put in a little office with postcards and souvenirs at the door. With a 2-franc entrance fee, they were in the tourist husiness.

Hired crews began digging out tons of earth that had accumulated over the cen-turies and, slowly, the chartreuse is beginning to look like its old self. In the digging process, they discovered a hread oven. That is when Miss Le Moina had the idea of putting it to work to make more money for the restoration project. They hired a haker and converted one of the beamed rooms into an authentically rustic roadside "inn." There, tourists can sample homemade bread, stuffed with olives, with sausage, pate and rose wine from the Var.

When President Pompidou dropped in unannounced, Hubert, the bartender, rushed out to greet him. But all he could find to say was: "I bope you like rose," "Sure," said the president.

With half the roofs still missing and tons of gravel yet to be removed, the chartreuse has a long way to go. "It will take us a lifetime." Miss Englebert said. "But the worst is over." The place is now on the tourist map. It is safe from modern pirates. Work is continuing. And the local authorities have promised to put in a paved
